Hosted Exchange FAQs

How is Hosted Exchange different to normal email?

Most email programs use technology which retrieves email messages to display on your device and then permanently removes them from the mail server. Hosted Exchange does not do this. Instead it stores your mailbox on our servers and then presents the message to your device (PC, lap top, mobile phone, tablet...). If any of these devices are lost, broken or stolen, you can simply log-in from another device and your email will be all there as if nothing happened.

Can I upgrade from Hosted Exchange 2003, 2007 or 2010?

If you already use Microsoft Exchange 2003, 2007 or 2010 any Emails hosted elsewhere can be transferred in quickly and easily with no impact on your data or day to day work.

What is my Hosted Exchange mailbox limit?

The maximum storage limit for every mail box is 10GB. You can also send emails with a maximum 30MB file attachment.

Where is my email stored?

All your data is hosted in our purpose built data centre which is manned 24/7/365. Additionally, your data is backed up every night and is totally secure.

Do I need a domain name?

Yes you do. You can use your existing domain or register a new domain.
